THE HEAD OF DATTO KAIM

By Albert W. Tolman.

(Copyright, by Shortstory Pub. Co.)

Through turbulent Mindanao, from Surigao's shark-infested straits to volcanic Butuan frowning over the Sea of Celebes, the Americans in garrison talked of the unconquered brigand, Datto Kaim, Bullets and bolo-slashes, generously dispensed in lightning raid and treacherous ambush, had taught them well his prowess as a dealer in the merchandise of war. Secret and deadly as a midnight serpent, he left a trail through the jungle as easy to follow as yesterday's pre-trail in the surrounding sea. Of his face and figure no white man could speak certainly, for the lips of the dead are sealed—yet many and various were the traits that were ascribed to him by his foes.

"He is tall and supple, with slender hands and feet, an Arab of the Arabs, handsome as Apollo and brave as a lion," said a young lieutenant, with conviction.

"Short and squat, black as burnt coffee, hideous as a nightmare, cruel and cowardly," was the dictum of a grizzled captain.

Still a third painted a different picture. The Moros themselves knew, but said nothing, deeming silence healthier than speech.

Worried at last by frequent tidings of Datto Kaim's evil deeds, the authorities at Manila determined that the brigand must be taken. "Alive or dead" ran the decree; and, as he had been a very cruel man, a price was set upon his head, with exemption and full pardon for any rebel who should bring it in.

Then began a hunt with Krag and Mauser through swamp and jungle and canebrake, over hill and valley, until finally the quarry came to bay in the wooded hollow of an old crater.

Deep in a bosque of tall cogon-grass lurked Datto Kaim. From his lair four scouts stole out by different trails to spy what way of escape lay open. The first panted back from the north with cheek redly bullet-scored.

"The Americans pigs hold the path," said he.

By the route that led to the sea the second slunk in.

"There also are the sons of the devil," was his report.

Quoth the third, fresh from the southern pass:

"They have a strange gun that talks faster than an angry woman."

The fourth scout did not come back at all. Then indeed the Datto knew that the game was near its close. He sat silent in the gloomy circle, hand toying with bolo-handle. His keen glance read the sullen faces, ere he spoke:

"Tis the end of the hunt. A price is on my head. Does anyone want it?"

All swore by Mahomed that they did not. But one man lied; and the Datto knew it. He arose, and the rest rose likewise.

"We must scatter, each for himself. Let none follow me; that path is safe for me alone."

Into the jungle they glided stealthily, a single man on every trail but one; and on that were two, far apart. But the first knew that the second was following.

Datto Kaim scaled a crag, and locked out through its screen of vines over the sun-kissed breeze-swept treetops. It was a pleasant world to live in. He had no desire to tread just yet the razor-edge of Sirat that bridges the believer over the pit of hell. To avoid it he would try a last resource. Again he sank into the foliage gloom.

That afternoon in a forest glen two contestants debated with bolos in quick-breathing silence. The issue was a question of heads; and the champion who argued more incisively passed out of the glade with two, one on his shoulders, the other in a bloody bag.

At sunset from the jungle-edge a white rag on a stick waved true to the American camp, and a brown man crept out with a grisly burden. To the sentries he said:

"Take me to your chief. I bring the head of Datto Kaim."

They led him in. Of the captain he exacted a solemn pledge:

"Swear to me on the Book of your Prophet that I, Soliman al-Melik, bearer of the head of Datto Kaim, shall go free and unharmed. I swear by the Black Stone of the Kaaba to be loyal to the United States."

The captain pledged him full pardon and safety.

"Now open the bag," said he; and the troopers, grouped around, stood at gaze with wide eyes and parted lips.

Out rolled a bloody head. They stared on it, fascinated, curious; for never before had white man seen the face of Datto Kaim and lived.

The captain broke the silence: "Is this the head of Datto Kaim?"

"No, but of his servant, a traitor who would have betrayed him."

"Where then is his head?" came the stern inquiry.

The brown man placed his hands upon his brow and saluted low.

"Behold, on the shoulders of Soliman al-Melik, loyal to the United States and protected by thine oath—the head of Datto Kaim."

Favorites of Fortune.

The Flores mine of San Luis Potosi was struck by a poor priest, who bought an abandoned claim for an "old song," and took $3,000,000 worth of silver out of it; and the accidental discovery of silver in the ashes of his camp fire made a millionaire of a negro fiddler.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys. B. F. Bugan, E. Broadway, Anadarko, Okla. says: "For about ten years kidney trouble had me in its grasp, no doubt being caused by hard work and my back became so lame that at times I could hardly get about. The passage of the kidney secretions were too frequent, dizzy spells often attacked me and I had distressing feelings in my head. On the advice of a friend, I procured Doan's kidney pills from the City Drug store. I improved steadily from the first and was soon entirely relieved. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a most efficient remedy for any trouble arising from the kidneys."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name Doan's—and take no other.

IN OKLAHOMA

Bartlesville—The unusual spectacle of carpenters working a full eight-hour shift at night has been witnessed here for the past two weeks. Contractors are rushing business buildings to completion in order that merchants may occupy the stores for the holiday trade.

Tulsa—Thirty thousand acres of land in the Arkansas valley region of Tulsa and Wagoner counties, annually liable to crop failures owing to overflows, is to be made safe for cultivation. The plan for improvement call for a dike along the river and complete system of drainage.

Bartlesville—An election to vote $42,000 school bonds will be held November 30. The proceeds of the bond sale will be used to reimburse the city of Bartlesville for real estate bought for the school district prior to statehood and to buy a site for the new $45,000 high school building.

Oklahoma City—The first brooms made from the Oklahoma broom corn crop of 1908 were completed at El Reno and a large consignment was sent out of the state to the trade. The crop this year was much better than for several years and the yield is larger. Much of the brush, however, has been shipped out of the state and will be made up into brooms at other places.

Guthrie—The broom along all industrial lines which has followed the election has been felt in the Panhandle country of Oklahoma and Texas in the form of an increased demand for farm lands in that section. Recent homeseekers' excursions to Oklahoma and Texas have brought a large number of progressive buyers to that section of the country.
